Ministerial Musings

Pastor Di Paterson

For those of you who watch television, I reckon that you have all seen the ad that tells us, "It all begins with Yes!" So many exciting adventures, life experiences and amazing learning opportunities begin with "Yes!" I know that for me, many of my life's experiences have started with a YES! For me, it has been times of joining a group, a team or an activity that might stretch my ability but I have said, YES! Saying yes, led to a few trips overseas and some great activities with Girl Guides. Saying yes to my children and encouraging them to pursue their dreams has given me the joy of seeing them working in careers they love and settled into loving families.

I guess for me, the biggest yes, was deciding to follow Jesus. So many exciting and amazing experiences have happened because I said yes to God and yes to Jesus. Sure, life has not always been smooth sailing, the Bible doesn't promise that, but walking through life with Jesus has given me the strength and the courage to step out in faith and to be open to the challenges that I have been invited to journey through. Being a Sunday School Teacher, Youth Group leader, being involved in Activity Days during the school holidays, Count Down to Easter and Christmas have all been fun activities that involved a team encouraging young people inside and outside of the Church. Emmaus as a pilgrim and a Spiritual Director and being the Guide Rep on the World Day of Prayer committee have all involved teams working together.

One of the things that I think is a hallmark of the Church is likeminded people working together to make a difference in the Church and the community. Working as a team means we have more ideas to work with, more people to help to do the activities and better outcomes for our Church Community and those we invite into our community space and those outside our Church who have great needs. All this involves people saying "Yes, I can do that!"

I believe that a Church community is a family and, as family, we like to spend time together. Unfortunately, as I write this musing, we are yet again in lockdown due to Covid-19. This means we are apart but as we keep saying, we may be apart but we are joined by the love and grace of the Holy Spirit. As we ring, text, email, ZOOM and join together on the live stream services, we realise just how fortunate we are to have such great technology to help us stay in touch. Part of our "Yes" in this challenging time is to remember to phone a friend or have a coffee chat with someone, on the phone, after worship.

As most of you are aware, I was honoured to receive an OAM in the Queen's Birthday Honours this year. I believe that I received this honour because I said "Yes" to the many things I was asked to do. Saying "Yes" gave me a real joy in sharing in the activities I was asked to do and most of all, I hope that in some way it made a difference to others. Our Yes to God and our Yes to being the people of God makes such a difference in our world because it shares the blessings around.

FAITH DEVELOPMENT MISSIONAL GROUP BLOGSPOT

Ross Mackinnon

The Journey with Jesus Foundation was established in 2004 in the USA to serve the global church through scholarship, teaching in third-world seminaries, consulting, and the promotion of Christian philanthropy.

Its webzine (Web Magazine) Journey with Jesus is published online every week and its mission emphasises six values—biblical fidelity, cultural relevance, critical inquiry, pastoral sensitivity, global awareness, and ecumenical generosity.

On its website you will find comments on the weekly lectionary readings, reflections on Christ and culture, book reviews, music reviews, poems, interviews, film reviews, podcasts and a gallery of paintings (old and new). The latest book review is of Peter Buttigieg's book Trust: America's Best Chance. This is a book about trusting our politicians. Although this book is about USA, its topic – trust and politicians – is relevant to us here as well.

The current poem on the website is by Native American Joy Harjo, the US poet laureate, and is entitled Perhaps the World Ends Here. I was very taken with it. Here it is.

The world begins at a kitchen table. No matter what, we must eat to live.

The gifts of earth are brought and prepared, set on the table.

So it has been since creation, and it will go on.

We chase chickens or dogs away from it.

Babies teethe at the corners.

They scrape their knees under it.

It is here that children are given instructions on what it means to be human.

We make men at it, we make women.

At this table we gossip,
recall enemies and the ghosts of lovers.

Our dreams drink coffee with us as they put their arms around our children.

They laugh with us at our poor falling-down selves and as we put ourselves back together once again at the table.

This table has been a house in the rain, an umbrella in the sun.

Wars have begun and ended at this table.

It is a place to hide in the shadow of terror.

A place to celebrate the terrible victory.

We have given birth on this table,
and have prepared our parents for burial here.

At this table we sing with joy, with sorrow.

We pray of suffering and remorse. We give thanks.

Perhaps the world will end at the kitchen table, while we are laughing and crying, eating of the last sweet bite.

These are just a couple of examples of what is available on the Journey with Jesus website. The website address

SOME POETIC FUN WITH SPOONERISMS

*Humour has been important for our wellbeing during the Corona Days.
Here is a little poetic fun based on Spoonerisms. For many years our family have enjoyed using
words in a fun way.
Spoonerisms are verbal errors or deliberate
playing with words
where the consonants,
vowels or parts of words
are switched around.
Revd. William Archibald
Spooner (1844-1930)
was a long-serving Oxford don. He was reputed to have often mixed up syllables in his speech. The frequently humorous phrases came to be known as Spoonerisms.*

HEALTH AND WELL-BEING SUPPLEMENT

Stories of, and from, our Glen Waverley Uniting Church community

Throughout this year we wish to share uplifting stories from church members about how they care for themselves and others during times of need and highlights of their journeys through life. If you have a story to tell please send your contribution to the Kingsway Magazine team of Joanne and David at office@gwuc.org.au.

I have worked as a manual hands on therapist for my whole working career of 30 years. It still delights me when one of the patients who has received treatment reports that they are more pain free, more able to move and perform normal daily activities and less worried about their health.

Our health status is a complex relationship involving our physical body, pain tolerance, emotional state and expectations, with an overlay on genetic and chronic conditions. We are fearfully and wonderfully made, and our unique attributes and history make us who we are.

I have great opportunity in my work as an osteopath to aid people in the physical recovery of injuries, to listen carefully to their emotional and mental health issues and show care and compassion. I work in a great team of practitioners who share in the care of the people who visit our clinic with their many and varied skill sets. How fortunate am I to partner with God in using the gifts and skills given to me, and to partner with people as they weave through what can be a confusing and overwhelming maze of difficulties regarding health.

I find chronic pain mechanisms intriguing, where nerve endings continue to register pain long after an injury has healed. This is referred to as sensitisation and is often accompanied by pain being reproduced with minor non-traumatic movements. These pain symptoms appear to come out of nowhere after not doing anything too vigorous, hence people with chronic pain tend to shrink away from anything vigorous, and even normal daily activities in case pain is a by product. This can lead quickly to disengaging in activities and self isolating, itself a slippery slope towards fear avoidance, depression and anxiety. Helping people find their way out of the maze of chronic pain symptoms is one of the greatest rewards, with a team approach of a handful of professionals.

Thank you Lord for putting this desire in my heart and for granting me the gifts to fulfil it.

FOLLOWING YOUR DREAM

Belinda Clear

In the opening pages of Dr. Seuss's Oh, The Places You'll Go! he writes:

Congratulations!

Today is your day.

You're off to Great Places!

You're off and away!

You have brains in your head.

You have feet in your shoes.

You can steer yourself any direction you choose.

You're on your own. And you know what you know.

And YOU are the guy who'll decide where to go.<sup>1</sup>

One's journey into the world of adult life always starts out with high hopes and many dreams about how this journey will pan out. But from my experience, adulting is most definitely something that we are not given a map for!

As Dr. Seuss says "YOU are the guy who'll decide where to go" and this is true to a certain extent, however the belief that you can do anything and be anything that you choose is a falsehood that sets way to many young adults up for "disappointment".

Throughout my school years I was certain that teaching was what I was going to do throughout my working years. My journey through university studying teaching was challenging, to say the least, and, in hindsight, was perhaps an indication that just maybe this wasn't the "right" path. (I write "right" path in inverted commas because I no longer believe that there is one "right path", just a whole lot of twists and turns in the rich journey that is life!) Sadly conversations about the life direction one is steering in are very rarely had until a roadblock proves unsurmountable.

After a brief time in classroom teaching, such a roadblock was encountered, and this led me along the path of exploring ministry. Positions in several congregations and further university study led me to explore a calling to ordained ministry. Last year (2020) I attended the Uniting Church VicTas Selection Conference and my application was knocked back. continued next page...

Whilst there was some initial devastation, the juncture I now find myself at is an exciting but terrifying one. I AM "the guy who'll decide where to go!"

One of the pitfalls of a post-school career change is the lack of "direction" you can get. Sure, there is no lack of people willing to offer "advice", but very few who are willing to help you work through the tears and frustrations that come with trying to decipher a map that just doesn't exist.

As a white skinned, educated person, I am privileged to be able to access resources to help me calibrate the compass that will lead me on the next part of my journey, but I recognise that not everyone has the means to be able to do this. With the assistance of a Career Coach, my compass is gradually starting to relocate its "due north". I am reminded that I am far from alone in the realisation that my "due north" has shifted through the experiences of my life thus far. The Australian College of Applied Psychology estimates that "five to seven career changes in a lifetime is the new average for Australian workers".<sup>2</sup>

Knowing that the climb is just as important as reaching the mountain summit helps me to realise that holding an understanding that one path would sustain me for my whole adult life was naive to say the least. Perhaps to assume a single path for any one sets up a dangerous goal that can never be achieved in today's climate.

And so to finish with some further advice from Dr. Seuss:

So ...

*be your name Buxbaum or Bixby or Bray or Mordecai Ali Van Allen O'Shea,
You're off to Great Places!
Today is your day!
Your mountain is waiting.
So ... get on your way!*

THE JOYS AND BENEFITS OF GROWING A MIXED-RACE FAMILY

Steven and Janice Fraser

We never thought we would be in a mixed-race relationship until we met back in 2012. The first couple of years being long distance enabled us to get to know each other on a deeper level and we believe that not being able to go on a date or 'see each other', lead to the strong base we now have growing our mixed-race family.

Being a mixed couple, Australian-Mauritian, and raising a mixed-race family comes with its challenges. We have had our share of discussions and concessions over the years, with differing cultures and upbringings providing different opinions and approaches to life. It also brings so many joys and benefits that outweigh all the above, and we prefer to focus on them instead. We have listed down some of the best things we think growing a mixed family brings:

Travel

Being able to travel (pre-covid) to tropical island Mauritius to visit family/in laws as well as exploring the beauties of Australia on a regular basis is wonderful. It gives us a chance to see our birth country through the eyes of the other one and have amazing holidays at the same time. It also is teaching our child (children soon when our baby boy joins us in a few weeks!) tolerance, being accepting of the differences in culture and countries and more importantly - open mindedness.

Food

Ohhh Food! This absolutely could be the number 1 benefit of being in a mixed-race family. Meals are never boring as we can go through our never ending Aussie or Mauritian cuisines. From lentil noir et rougaille saucisse one night to Chicken parma the next... our taste buds are never bored!

Language

Between us we speak 3 different languages! French, English and Mauritian Creole. Our children will be multi-lingual which in the era we live in is a bonus for their future. Steve, although still not as confident in speaking French or Mauritian Creole, can understand and be part of a conversation when in Mauritius. The ability for our children to converse in 3 languages will make them a citizen of the world and we can only hope for a bright future for them.

We will most likely have more topics to address in the coming years, more concessions to make but at the same time, we know that together, blending our different traditions and cultures, we can make the most of this life as a mixed-race family.

THOUGHTS, SKILLS AND ADD WATER

David Williams

After many years of teaching watercolours and practising it, one gathers many observations, reflections and opinions. Working with adults and children provides a strong contrast of the enthusiasm, application and personal reactions to the paintings produced.

A group of about thirty teachers who were interested in adding watercolours to their art curricula worked on several small paintings to experiment with this medium. Almost immediately they enjoyed the magical effects produced by applying paint to wet paper. The water and fine hair brushes produced surprising results and when back at their schools their enthusiasm would be passed on to their pupils. Watercolours were not usually included in the busy, very varied art programmes but these teachers found the work engaging, surprising and enjoyable.

Starting afresh with young children is quite different and before we started we often had to deal with the children's health, moods and readiness for work. At first demonstrations and instructions were given. Soon we observed that some children lacked concentration and the drive to tackle new situations. A hurdle for some children is the change from stiff bristle brushes they have always used for thick paint, to soft hair brushes and watery paints.

We have observed various attitudes to getting started ranging from reluctance to very keen. However after a few blips the small practice exercises are mostly done well. The blending of colours on wet paper becomes a pleasing, new experience for most children.

Later in a second session we led the children into their "Masterpiece" session. They were shown different examples of paintings, some easy and some more complicated. At this stage we encouraged the children to do their own thing with their own ideas. We encouraged them to concentrate on the painting of their picture and not the drawing which is a separate skill to be taught later. A huge variety of paintings emerged and when displayed, the children displayed enthusiasm and pride in their work.

After sixty-seven "Artist-in-Residence" programs we have seen countless, hundreds, of happy young watercolourists and of course, other children who didn't cope well. It has been a marvellous experience in many schools and much appreciated by the schools involved.

The sum of all this is that teaching watercolour painting is very worthwhile and rewarding for children and their teachers. It involves much visual, observational and personal qualities plus copious amounts of encouragement and the catch phrase "add more water".

Order of Australia Medal - OAM recipient 2021

Text by Cam Lucadou-Wells (Star Journal) 14/06/2021

For more than 65 years, Dianne Paterson has been a Guide in more ways than one.

In the 2021 Queen's Birthday Honours list, Ms Paterson is named an Order of Australia Medal (OAM) recipient for her unwavering service to Girl Guiding and the community.

The humble and inspirational Springvale South resident says she won't believe it until she sees her name in print.

"I'm gobsmacked.

"I've just had so much fun doing what I'm doing."

Along the way, as a long-standing leader of Brownies, Guides and Rangers, she's tried to instil into her protégés that they're "people of value".

"They're to value themselves and they're to value each other."

Service has been a large part of her life – its part of taking the Guide's 'Promise' to serve 'God and the Queen'.

The same Promise that is now sworn to 'our country and to develop our beliefs'.

From the time Ms Paterson started Brownies as an eight-year-old in 1956, she never left the movement.

She has led units in Noble Park, Springvale South and Footscray.

Served on the Girl Guides Victoria state council executive, been a Guides state trainer and a volunteer and chaplain on four International Guide Camps.

On the international camps, Ms Paterson led 'Amazing Faith' activities – focusing on the similarities between various faiths.

Recently, Girl Guides Australia awarded Ms Paterson the Grey Kangaroo and 50 Years Membership awards.

Currently, girls have a lot of alternative activities to Guiding – many more than in the 'Golden years' when Ms Paterson started out.

But the Guides' values remain timeless such as showing care, support and valuing teamwork.

"When you work as a team, you achieve," she says.

"It happens when you go on camp – if you work together you have a successful camp. If someone doesn't pull their weight, the camp isn't as balanced."

Even with a leadership hierarchy, everyone is regarded equal. Everyone pitches in "side by side".

Often on camps, leaders including Ms Paterson are the ones that clean toilets and the rubbish bins.

"They do it because it needs to be done.

"There's nothing quite like the fun of going to a tip during a camp and talking to the guys at the tip."

There's no five-star treatment, she says – recalling a Rangers event at Norfolk Island where they bunked in a hall crawling with cockroaches.

Though she adds there were also cockroaches in the "five-star" hotel at the time.

Guides has connected her to "amazing people" across the world.

"I venture to suggest I don't know what my life would be like without it."

For the past six years, Ms Paterson has been Supply Minister at Black Rock Uniting Church. She also works in pastoral care at Glen Waverley Uniting Church.

She is a member of Girl Guides Australia's Trefoil Guild – the adult chapter that fundraises to help Guides pay for uniforms.

"I'm still paid up and passionate," she says.

"Once you've volunteered and once you've been involved, the commitment never finishes.

"It goes on for the rest of your life."

A number of other Uniting Church members have been recognised for their service to the wider community in a wide range of fields and disciplines.

God Forbid – Disagreeing well (ABC Radio National program)

In some ways we will always be different – it's a wonderful part of life, but it comes with disagreement and even conflict. But intolerance can be a good and natural response to the intolerable. James Carleton and the God Forbid panel explore the difference.

In this episode: Some of us find disagreements uncomfortable or difficult, so it's just easier to go with the flow. But dissent can be vital to the wellbeing of workplaces, organisations – even society itself. So, when is the pain of disagreement worth it? We're told that political partisanship is fiercer than ever. Are we entering an era of 'terminal disagreement'? What role does social media play? Why not just talk with your enemy? Sometimes it's just not possible, but it's difficult to tell when it's a time for peace or a time for war.

Duration: 54min 7sec / Broadcast: Sun 13 Jun 2021, 6:05am
